

With very best wishes for Christmas and the new year from the English Department and the Library

This Christmas, get yourself into a great story...

Seasonal suspense

Elizabeth Holmes was billed as the female Steve Jobs: a Stanford dropout whose startup "unicorn" promised to revolutionize the medical industry. One problem: her product didn't actually work. But she wasn't going to let that stand in her way...

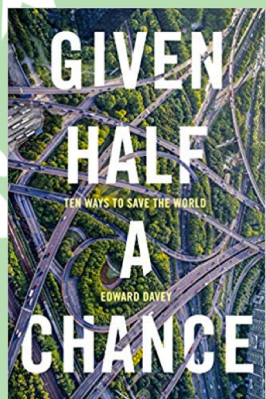

Winter weird

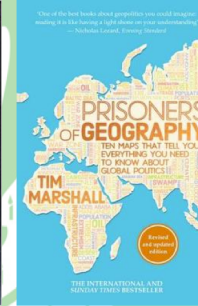

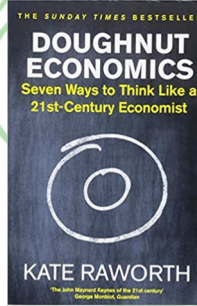

Beijing police ask nanotech engineer Wang Miao to infiltrate a secretive cabal of scientists after a spate of inexplicable suicides. His investigation lead him to a conspiracy that spans light-years and an extinction-level threat facing humanity.

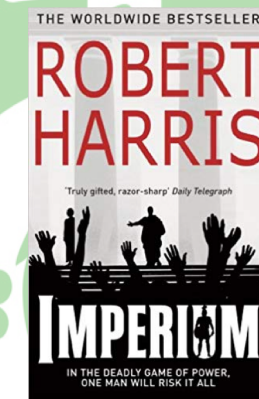

Festive facts

From flourishing farms in Ethiopia to solar harvesting in Nevada: this book shows how, across the world, people are successfully tackling key global challenges, and how their approaches might be scaled up and replicated elsewhere.

Fireside feasts

Rome, 70 B.C. A city of power - and of men who would wield it. Imperium takes us into the violent, treacherous world of Roman politics, and the quest of one man - clever, compassionate, devious, vulnerable - to reach the top.
