EDITORIAL.

WITH a convenient alliteration this term has been famous for floods and 'flu.' The latter has not been so virulent as the great scourge of last term, but has been equally ubiquitous and persistent; we write these remarks ourself in bed for the third time this term with a touch of the fiend, and the school has been deprived for a considerable period of the services of Mr. Ross-Barker who has unhappily been severely attacked. The prevalence of these germs combined with continued rigorous weather have indeed very seriously impeded the normal life of the school, perhaps more particularly the athletic side of it; it must be some time for example since rowing has known such a poor season.

The end of the war has happily restored to us our Mathematical Master, Mr. W. A. Rudd; though he is still to be seen in martial garb we believe that he is now definitely secured to us as far as the military authorities are concerned.

On another subject connected with the war—the School War Memorial—we are asked to state that on further consideration and discussion the committee chosen to look after the project has decided to make a change in the nature of the Memorial proposed; full details of the new proposal are given in the circular which accompanies this magazine.

ROWING.

Last term we had some reason to regard the coming season as likely to prove more successful and interesting than those during the war; after a long break due to the war, our annual contest with Monckton Coombe was to be resumed, and with three of last year's colours left we had some prospect of acquitting ourselves worthily.

The rowing term however has been a succession of set-backs. We began by hearing that last year's bow was forbidden to race by doctor's orders; then the floods arrived and practically never went, rendering coaching virtually impossible; only in Culham Cut was anything useful possible, and on ordinary afternoons time was not available to practise on this stretch and return home against raging floods in time for school. The floods have not been so extensive in fact, and so lasting in the last five years. The influenza put the final touch to our troubles; bow, stroke, and 'three' were at different times incapacitated, and a fortnight before the race the crew had been out twice only together, and at the moment 'two' only was not both hors de combat and likely to be so for some time. We had no option therefore but to scratch the race with great regret. It certainly, however, could not have taken place as neither the floods nor the influenza had sufficiently abated even at the date on which the race had been fixed.

Tubbing, of course, was also most seriously interfered with and the standard of rowing in first and second fours and among the novices was much lower than usual. However, given reasonable conditions next year we may expect with sufficient exertion to recover ourselves.

Under the circumstances it is not really possible or useful to give detailed characters as usual.

R. E. Eason stroked the four and rowed always with neatness and steadiness and set a very good style to those behind him; Davidge, as captain, did a great deal of heroic work under difficulties, and at 'three' took his customary large share in the work if he did not show quite the neatness of stroke; Glenny, George, and Meacock who were practically new to rowing in fours did very well considering all things and were given half-colours; they should be useful next season. Haynes steered as calmly as ever, and Sinclair makes a fair deputy. Practically all those at the river showed keenness and there is not much to choose between those not mentioned in skill; Blacknell and Barber show some promise; Stovell and Clark, who completed an unofficial "Second Four," are stalwart workers with incorrigible styles.

SKATING.

Is it freezing? What was the temperature last night? Such were the questions asked at the beginning of the term. Soon the ice bore a little, so everybody went to find out if there was any ice at Sutton Wick; but the ice was not strong enough, so a good many went into the water. Two or three days later the ice bore well and we were let off some school in the afternoon. Then there was a lot of fun; heaps of people kept on falling down. But the best fun was in the form of long lines, stretching right across the ice, and woe betide anybody that got in the light. After about four or five days the ice began to get cut up a good deal. Skating by moonlight was great fun, but we could not see where there were any holes, and very often you came down a good crash. But after a time it started to thaw and it got very nasty.

A PLEA FOR MERCY.

(On being scowled at in an alarming manner by a fair Sinn Feiner of very tender years).

I.

Why look daggers at me—when
I am just as other men?
Does my uniform or belt
Make its odious presence felt?
I would sooner far, instead

Get a bomb—

Or a barrage—blazing red—
Burst in fury round my head
On the Somme.

II.

Thanks to you—rebellious mita—
I shall lie awake all night,
Toss and turn in my valise;
Never know a moment's peace
More or less.

Till I hear the bugles going,
Draw the curtains—find it's snowing—
And a hurricane a-blowing
Round the Mess.

III.

Mercy—mercy! Have you none
For a wretched Subaltern?
On your head my blood shall be
If you ever look askance at me;
Cold as stone.
Do you want to drive me balmy?
Blowed if I'd have joined the Army
If I'd known!

 SPRING.

Awake! our hearts, and sing,
For gold and purple Spring
Once more o'er hill and dale her beauty twines.
Beside the winding river
The new young rushes quiver,
And all the woods are clad with celandines.

When marybuds unfold,
Though March's winds are cold,
Their wings are laden with the scent of flowers;

The palm is on the willow,
Where streams are clear and shallow,
And violets wake within their sheltered bowers.

Awake! our hearts, and sing,
The bird is on the wing,
And Spring's rare melody again we hear;
So we our voices raise,
Exultant in His praise,
Who made the sweetest season of the year.

 "ON THE WAY UP PARNASSUS."

I.

Old King Cole was a merry old soul
Until he got the "flu,"
Then around his court did he patrol
And finished with—Atishu!!!
At once he summoned his fiddlers three,
His fiddlers were very grim,
He sat in bed and took his tea,
While those fiddlers fiddled with vim.
The "flu" had gripped him, Oh so hard,
That after swallowing his encyclopædia,
He gave his fiddlers his ration card
And afterwards died of pneumonia.

I.W. (V.b.)

II.

The sixes were this term played out,
A noble but a savage bout,
Some sixes were unevenly matched,
While others on wet days were scratched.
Some sixes felt so very sore,
They could not beat the others' score,
They played as they had never played,
To shoot a goal they all essayed.

P.A. (Rem.)

III.

In the morning at five past eight,
Just as you hear the breakfast bell,
You get up at an awful rate
And trip up on the floor with a yell.

G.S.S. (V.b.)

[Readers who are not much impressed, little know the laborious and rare character of this author's muse.]—E.D.

IV.

When you get up early in the morning,
Everyone seems to be snoring,
Sometimes the rain is pouring,
And it makes it awfully boring.
Sometimes the sun comes up alight
And fills everybody with delight.

V.J.R. (II. Form).

V.

Spring is here at last,
The birds are on their nests,
Winter now is passed,
And this is my very best.

G.L. (II. Form).

THE TREACHERY OF THE 'FLU GERM.

Never was there a greater disappointment in the school. The 'flu germ had basely deserted us! For three or four days we had watched with heartless glee the gradually decreasing numbers at call-over and at meals. Each morning the attendance at breakfast was smaller—and many a boy went into the work-room after "prep." not to be seen again for several days. The announcement that someone was not feeling well was received with shouts of joy and advice to go to bed immediately and not to hold out any longer was showered upon him—never was such solicitude shown for his health. The papers were eagerly devoured for news—had it reached Oxford yet—was it on the decline at all? How many would have to go down before the school should be closed? The queues in the work-room for Izal, cinnamon, and handkerchiefs started again, and the old campaigners brought out their sweaters and mufflers. All looked merry and bright with the prospect of going home in about a week at the most—and then the first batch came down again.

They turned up at dinner, amid the groans of the whole remaining school. That was practically the end of all hope—in batches of two or three they trickled down until only a few remained. The prospect of being sent home gradually receded into the distance and the grim realisation of another four weeks to come returned with full force.

The popularity of the 'flu germ is most decidedly on the wane.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL LECTURES.

During the last weeks of the Christmas term and the first half of this term, four lectures have been given in the Corn Exchange under the auspices of the Berkshire Archæological Society. The majority of the school have been able to attend all the lectures, obtaining the usual seats in the front of the hall, where one has the advantage of hearing the lecturer distinctly, but the disadvantage of having to look up at the photographs thrown on the screen by the lantern at the back of the auditorium.

In the first lecture the Rev. A. L. Cortie spoke on the beginning of all things and explained how worlds were formed by masses of fiery matter known as nebulae. Father Cortie seems to have been a great traveller and showed many photographs taken by himself in different parts of the world.

The Rev. E. C. Spicer in the next lecture began his with the world thus prepared, and brought before our notice the beginnings of life upon this world in the shape of weird prehistoric iguanadons, pleiosaurs and pterodactyls. The third lecture was given by Mr. Reginald Smith on the subject of man's first appearance; the slides shown on this occasion consisted mostly of photographs of flints which to those uninitiated into the mysteries of archæology, were tedious.

The fourth and last lecture entitled "Man becomes civilised," was given by Mr. Frank Stevens; this lecture was perhaps the most interesting; one of the chief reasons for this was the fact that it was not so much beyond our comprehension as the others.

The course of lectures was well rounded off by Mr. Stevens urging the youth of Abingdon to turn archæologist and help support the proposed Abingdon Museum.

FOOTBALL SIXES.

This year the Sixes were again played in two divisions, the Seniors, chosen from members over the age of fourteen, and the Juniors from those under fourteen.

There were sufficient numbers this term for us to have nine Senior Sixes captained by members of last year's elevens, and seven Junior Sixes.

Barber and Miles i., each obtained 13 points, so the final was played between them, Miles winning by 6 goals to 1. The winning Six consisted of: Miles i. (capt.), Carpenter, Badcock i., Foottit, Morland iii., Franklin.

In the Juniors, Crook's Six had an easy victory, winning every game they played, obtaining 12 points; while Aldworth and Kitto ii. each obtained 7 points. The winning Six was as follows: Crook (capt.), Stiles, Stevens ii., Miles ii., Relle, Dunkin.

Unfortunately the influenza epidemic interfered a good deal with the matches, and although the games were not postponed, many of the Sixes were almost entirely composed of substitutes.

As in the previous year considerable slackness and lack of interest were shown by the boys, especially in the matter of leaves. On the whole, however, the institution seems sufficiently popular to merit its continuance next year.

The following are the results of the Senior and Junior Sixes:—

TROUBLES.

The end of term approaches and with it the now usual request, or rather command: "I want you to write something for the Abingdonian." So far, so good, as far as the Editor is concerned, for his trouble ceases here. But to the unfortunate writer it means long periods of hard thinking, eased and helped a little by much hair ruffling. At last, after scribbling a few words and crushing up a huge amount of paper, you decide that writing prose is off, and now you try poetry. But what has happened! the words will not rhyme; you think with envy of people such as Shakespeare and Tennyson who could manufacture such stuff by the scroll, and of the untruthfulness of that old adage, "Vouloir c'est pouvoir." In desperation you write a very humble apology to the Editor for your lack of inventive genius, which after all is not your fault, but your misfortune.

 AN ADVENTURE.

Up in the Little-room dormitory there was a hole under a bed where the mice came through the hole and got into a drawer and scratched about and two of us got out and got clothes brushes and went to the drawer and opened it and it ran out and we chased it all round the room, and all at once it escaped down a hole and we got into bed again, and during the night it came again and so we left it alone till after a bit. And in the morning we got out of bed and we went to the drawer and as soon as we opened it, it ran out and we never heard of it again.

E.T. (II.)

EXTRACT from a letter from Captain H. A. L. Donkin, dated Dec. 12, 1918, at Bucharest:—

"I don't know when this letter will go—not before I get back to Rustchuk, I expect, but I will explain. There is the Colonel of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, myself and a Gunner sub., and 30 men from the Division, my C.G.M. amongst them, came up here last Saturday for a dinner given by the King and Queen of Rumania to a proportion of French, British and Rumanian troops. The dinner was to have been on Sunday, but the Queen has got 'flu, after being out on the beastly day they had for the entry into the capital, procession and all. So we have been stopping here and the dinner is to-night, but the Queen isn't to be there, and I did want to see her so. However, well, I will start the story from the beginning. We crossed the river and came up by car, the men in French motor lorries. It was a lovely change to find a country practically without any hills, but now I come to think about it, it is almost too flat. The peasants seem to do any amount of work, all the fields are cultivated and their houses are quite neat and tidy, painted, etc., but the usual filth all round them. They say they suffered a lot from the Bosch and the Bulgar, but it is not apparent at all. We arrived in the town and went to the French Headquarters. The men are billeted in a small hotel and we are in the "knutty" hotel of the place. We had to hang round an awful time that evening, as one lorry got lost, but finished up all right. Food is an awful price, about ten times the usual, so they say, and everything else in proportion. If you want a description of the town, read "The Prisoner of Zenda" again. It is really top hole being in a decent town again, if it wasn't so expensive. We went to a Society show on Sunday night, where they danced Roumanian dances, and then we had other dancing afterwards: great effort. We are more or less under the orders of the military people and get all sorts of shows and things. The Colonel dined with the King last night, and we all go to dinner to-night. As the Colonel says, this is no place for a common or garden soldier. We have to rush round and leave cards, etc. French is the useful language, but any number of the society people speak English. We go back on Saturday, I believe. Rustchuk will seem a very dead-alive hole, I guess. Still, one can't continue on here like this for ever. This is a miniature Paris. Well, well, my invitation from the King to dine shall be put in the family archives in due course."

A DISASTER.

An awful visitation came to the School on Saturday, March 8th; in the opinion of most boys it was far worse than 'flu (a microbe of bad repute who visited the school about mid-term). This disease started in the schoolroom where two forms were congregated for work (a microbe of far worse repute than 'flu, but it rarely visits us for long), the germ quickly spread and by the end of the morning only the 2nd form and one or two other boys had escaped it. As the bell went, boys crept out of class with a hunted look on their faces, some seemed surprised that they were alive, others tried to appear as if nothing had happened, but it was no good, their haggard looks betrayed them. When dinner came, hardly a sound was heard, every tongue was silent, but after a good meal their tongues began to be loosened and at last they dared to speak of the subject which was on everyone's mind—

The Latin Grammar Paper.

W.M. (VI.)

FLOODS.

Rain, rain, all day long! The leaden clouds pour down their watery load on the wretched places beneath them. The miserable school-boy turns out to sports the most bigotted pessimist on the face of the earth, never looking forward to the inevitable consequence of such a torrent, i.e., Floods!

Floods are always a source of amusement to the younger male members of the community. It is always a rag to see pieces of the road covered with water until, of course, it comes to sports of any description except rowing. Rowing is naturally much enhanced by the usual water-courses exceeding their boundaries and it appeals to the imagination to see boats going along merrily where one is accustomed to see two or three lackadaisical cattle mournfully chewing their cud.

Floods in many countries are a source of great utility both in the productive and a defensive way. The Nile annually covers a large proportion of its basin with a rich carpet of beautiful soil which the natives immediately make use of for agricultural purposes. Also witness the number of times the Dutch have cut the dykes and saved themselves from being wiped out of their country by foreign powers.

There is, however, one huge drawback to the extensive use of such things. The amount of destruction done by floods is enormous. Besides the huge amount of deaths that they are responsible for, a terrific amount of damage is done to the surrounding countryside, so that the game of playing at floods is hardly worth the candle.

Floods are most amusing when they are harmless, especially when King Frost pays a visit at the same time, but they are on the whole a little too disastrous to be kept up for long.

J.E.A.C. (VI.)

A COMPLAINT.

Dear Sir,

I write you this letter, which I may at once assure you contains not the ghostliest flavour of humour, to complain, but not as you might suppose of the weather, or even rationing, but of the excess of Latin 'prep.' set each evening, after a strenuous day of toil in school.

I, amongst others, have for many moons, groaned under the tyrannical rule of masters who take this subject, I refer chiefly to those unlucky people who try to translate Cæsar, which I suppose is not really hard, but is rendered so by Cæsar himself, who in his spare afternoons put all the words in their wrong order, in consequence of which, one feels so tired after chasing about through notes and the vocabulary, that it is futile to try and get up for breakfast at 8 o'clock next morning; and the irony of it is that in the period during the day, you will be, politely or otherwise, informed that you have not tried to prepare the stuff!

I do not mind doing a little Latin, say about half the usual amount, and if you could bring your influence to bear on this point or see your way to forwarding this wish, you would oblige many members of the school.

Yours truly,

T.S. (V.a.)

O.T.C.

The efficiency of the Corps has steadily increased this term. Parades have been greatly handicapped again this term by a slight touch of the "flu" which the School experienced, and also by the very wet weather. The recruits, however, have made considerable progress.

No promotions have been made. The Corps has shown a decided increase in size of late, which is shown by the number of new uniforms ordered this term, and will go increasing in proportion to present growth of the school.

SCHOOL NOTES.

F. M. Meacock, L. C. George, F. B. Glenny have been awarded Half-Colours for rowing.

We congratulate Mrs. Watson on her engagement.

We have received visits from the following old boys: H. A. L. Donkin, P. L. Howard, L. A. Lewis, E. L. Parry, J. N. Sanders, L. A. Weaving, W. H. Wood.

An attempt to arrange an Old Boys' Sports has proved unavailing, as too few will be able to be present.

We congratulate C. V. Davidge on his election to the Pembroke Scholarship.
